Medicine Lodge, Kan., May 31.—(Special.)—A series of three games of ball having been arranged for in this city, between Wellington and Medicine Lodge, on Tuesday, Friday and Saturday. Wellington's crack team came over and gave our boys a few pointers on the grand sport. They proved such good teachers that after the first inning Medicine Lodge had circled the diamond nine times while Wellington could get no further than second. With such a lead our boys played with a determination that boded little good to the pitcher from Wellington, who did the twirling for the Wellington boys. Our boys batted well and stole bases almost at will, while Ellis, the Medicine Lodge catcher, caught almost every Wellington man that attempted to steal a base.

Toward the close of the game Garland went into the box for Wellington, but was unable to stem the tide of baseruns. Axline for Medicine Lodge, struck out 16 men.

The high wind and dust was responsible for the large score.

The "smoke of battle" was no fiction in this game. Score: Medicine Lodge . . . 23

RAIN IS RECOGNIZED

WHEAT MARKET SEIZES ON IT FOR A PRETEXT, AT LEAST.

Not That Anybody Supposes That the Dead Winter Wheat Will be Resurrected, or That There is Anything but Rust for the Living Blade, but It is a Pretty Good Time to Even Up With Other Markets. Anyhow—Wheat Goes Two Cents Lower—Everything Else Takes a Drop—Honor to Graham's Memory.

Chicago, May 31.—Wheat closed 2 cents, corn 1 1/2 cents and oats 1 1/2 cents lower than on Wednesday, with much lighter trading than has been the rule of late. Provisions closed with moderate declines.

Wheat at the opening was for sale at from 7 1/2 cents down to 70 cents for July, as against 80 1/2 cents at the end of Wednesday's session. The decline was in acknowledgment of the rain which fell very generally yesterday and this morning in the northwest and southwest, west of the Mississippi. It was not supposed that the had winter wheat in that country had been re-suscitated or that such as still gave promise of a yield worth cutting for, could be otherwise than injured by the rain when followed by such a hot, muggy, rusting state of the atmosphere as prevailed today. The price of wheat, however, was generally conceded to require readjusting with the prices of other markets of the country and of the world, and there appeared to be feeling in the air that some additional sensations from the present extraordinary weather might be necessary to make the looked for readjustment of prices in a manner favorable to the bulls. The winter wheat crop is not supposed to have received any benefit from the rain, but the speculative vigor which has been so conspicuous was notably relaxed today. That was another reason why the leveling down of prices here to a parity with the seaboard values should now be in order, and all the more seeing that in a very short time there will be new wheat on the market and there is still some left in the visible supply. The people who have been down in the country, in Indiana and Illinois, have no idea that any readjustment of prices is likely except one which shall recognize the fact of the amount of damage to the crops of those states which nothing so far published from them has begun to approach. Well authenticated reports received today indicate a state of affairs of which nothing short of a spectacular demonstration could convince the Chicago pit traders. Some of them said the failure of crops was complete, and these reports were accompanied by buying orders. A great number of long lines were sold out today and toward the close the weak feeling became so pronounced that even the regularly recognized short sellers indulged in their irrepressible propensity. After the opening at from 73 to 74 1/2 cents an advance to 80 cents was gradually affected and that proved the highest point of the day. It declined to 78 1/2 cents, recovered to 79 1/2 cents, and then broke to 78 1/2 cents, the latter being the price at the close.

Corn opened weak and was notably so during the session. General rains throughout the country and a showery condition east of the river, predicted for today, gave the market its downward reaction. July, which closed on Wednesday at 53 1/2 cents, opened at 53 cents sellers, and a few buyers at above 52 1/2 cents. It declined in the course of the day to 52 1/2 cents, which was the prevailing price a minute or two before the closing, but it reacted to 52 1/2 cents.

For a short session, trading in oats was very heavy, and the market selling freely on the decline that prices were perceived, and offerings were quite readily taken up by local parties and the crowd in general. The market closed at 29 1/2 cents, the latter being the price at the close.

The provision business was moderate in volume at some decline in values. From an opening at 12 1/2 cents for corn, the prevailing price a minute or two before the closing, but it reacted to 12 1/2 cents.

For a short session, trading in oats was very heavy, and the market selling freely on the decline that prices were perceived, and offerings were quite readily taken up by local parties and the crowd in general. The market closed at 29 1/2 cents, the latter being the price at the close.
